The 20th concert of the Musical Union will take place at Normal Hall on the evening of June 25th. Although the Normal is not as convenient a location as the Opera House it is much cooler and will better accommodate the large Chorus orchestra, and we hope, audience. Those who so thoroughly enjoyed the oratorio given a year ago by the society will be equally delighted with this. For the solo singers we have a greater attraction than could be offered then. Madam Florence Rice Knox, Mrs. M. Hewitt Tyler, Mr. Will Kimbal and Joslin, of Detroit, taking the solos this year. One half of the program will include ballads by Mrs. Knox, a quartette by the soloists, orchestral and piano-forte pieces. Let all who care to hear beautiful music now and in the future give their hearty support to this concert, by attending with their friends.

James Fisk, Sr., father of the late Col. Jas. Fisk, the railroad and steamboat king, of New York City, is in town, exhibiting, under a three center pole tent, a wonderful invention. It consists of harness so arranged that by the means of a simple lever, the horses may be detached in an instant from the carriage, which is stopped by a brake, and the lines are left in the hands of the driver. A street parade is given every morning, headed by the band. Mr. Fisk will remain here over Sunday, and give a temperance address in the evening. He gives an entertainment to-day in the afternoon and evening. The tent is near Grant's factory, between Adams and Hamilton streets.

Ypsilanti has a good many things to brag of, but one thing she can not brag on is a City Hall, and especially the lower part of the one we now have. It is cold, and damp, and not fit for a person who expects to live out half their days to remain in, and yet a family is expected to live there and care for the prisoners. The cells are a disgrace to the city. One of them has no bedstead, or place to sleep of any kind, since the "Prophet Elijah" stayed there, and the other is not supplied with bed clothes. This might do if no one but tramps or drunken men were put in there but it not unfrequently happens that respectable people are compelled to pass a few days there. A case of that kind happened this week. An old gentleman, troubled with the neuralgia, respectable to all appearances, and for ought we know, innocent, spent a few nights there. There was nothing for him to sleep on but a tick and one article of covering. A person in no way connected with the city government, happened in and saw that he had not sufficient covering for the night. This matter had better be tended to.

The latter part of last week men were engaged putting in a sluice across Washington street on the north side of Ellis street. The workmen removed the earth Friday, finishing just at night, leaving an opening over night. They built up a protection on one side but on the side the dirt was thrown out none was built, the dirt itself being thought a sufficient barrier. This would have been safe in daylight, but, in the night, people who passed by say they could not see the embankment. At any rate Mr. F. Clemmens, of Disborrough did not appear to discover it for he droveover it and into the ditch, the buggy remaining there, the horse breaking loose from it. His wife and infant child was with him. The only person injured was Mrs. Clemmens, who received a shock from which she has not yet fully recovered. She was taken into Dr. Kingsley's, and Dr. Kinney called. On examination it appeared that her back was injured though nothing permanent. She was able to leave Dr. Kingsley's Tuesday. Mr. Clemmens will make out his bill and present it to the city. Whether the city is liable or not, remains to be settled.

Last Sunday was observed as children's day at the M. E. church. In the morning Mr. Washburne gave a sermon, particularly for the children. He took for his text, Samson's riddle, and after telling them the story in an interesting manner, he impressed upon their minds the fact that there are lions in the path of every child. by seeking the right help, they can be overcome. In the evening a paper was read by Mrs. S. W. Parsons on Robert Raikes. She gave in a pleasing manner an outline of his life work. The name of Robert Raikes is familiar to most adults as the man who started the first Sunday School. This essay fully accorded with the remarks which followed by Prof. Mc. Louth. His remarks applied to the parents of the children as well as to the children themselves, but, a child seven or eight years of age can see the truth of his statements. He gave a brief outline of the lives of a few of the great men, and pointed out the fact that when children they were great lovers of books. Get a child interested in the right kind of literature and he has no time for mischief. Rev. Mr. Washburne alluded to the fate of the six boot blacks from Detroit, noticed in last weeks COMMERCIAL, and asked the children to decide whether they wanted to be like them or the men they had heard about during the evening.

TEMPERANCE RALLY.

The temperance people have taken advantage of Mr. Fisk Sr., being in town with his big tent, and have made arrangements for a rally to-morrow afternoon and evening. In the afternoon Bob Fraser and the Ann Arbor club will be down. In the evening Rev. Mr. Grenell, pastor of the First Baptist church, Detroit, and Mr. Fisk, himself, will address the meeting. Admission free. Mr. Fisk is an old temperance worker, having been in the field over forty years.

A CARD.

The ladies of the Ypsilanti Library Association feel that much of the success attending the recent "Art Loan Exhibition," is due to the interest manifested by friends outside of the society, therefore they wish to tender a vote of thanks: first, to the Friendly Press, which from beginning to end so ably set forth the interesting features of the entertainment; to Mr. Sam'l Post, for the use of the building so admirably fitted for the exigencies of the exhibition; to Messrs. Jeness & Babbitt for Insurance; and the stockholders of the gas company for their generous donation; and to Mr. Don Mathews for assistance as entering clerk, and to Mr. S. Barnard for his valuable services in many ways. The ladies who had the exhibit under their especial charge, would particularly express their appreciation of the assistance, so cheerfully and unremittingly given, by Mrs. J. F. Sanders, Miss Minnie Perkins, Mrs T. C. Owen, Miss Lillis Burt, and their several assistants. Finally, will our citizens and friends who, from their collections of the rare, curious and beautiful, furnished the exhibit, accept the thanks of a society, which in borrowing from the community, strives to return, in many fold, by building up an institution of general public benefit.

Chairman Executive Committee.

A CASE FOR LAWYERS.

Some strange things happen in this world. A case is set down for next Tuesday that has something of the mysterious in it. About two months ago, Messrs. Yost and Cleaveland ordered a lot of buggies of Louis Cook, Cincinnati. When they arrived here on account of some defect in the buggies they were not accepted. Mr. Cook wrote on to his agent in Detroit, Henry Boylan, to dispose of them to the best advantage, according to his judgement. He came out and sold them to Mr. Bogardus. He also sold another lot of buggies and left for Canada with the money in his possession. Mr. Cook followed him into Canada and found him at Manitoba. Boylan says that Mr. Cook had bonds for the money he (Boylan) had, and that he could not be legally arrested. Cook and Boylan settled at Manitoba, Cook giving Boylan the following paper:

IN THE QUEEN'S BENCH.

THE QUEEN, Plaintiff
HENRY P. BOYLAN, Defendant.

In consideration of the said defendant consenting to deliver up possessions of the monies taken from him by the authorities of Manitoba in this matter and now impounded by law in this court, I hereby agree to withdraw the information and complaint herein, and prosecute this case no farther and not to prosecute any other case against him for the like cause in the United States of America; also to repay his reasonable traveling expenses from Manitoba to Detroit, Michigan, and to receive the said defendant back into my employ provided he gives satisfaction and and security according to my usual terms of hiring servants and employees.

Signed in presence of
P. Munger.

He had $1,660 in his possession when found and agreed to make up the difference out of his salary. He was to receive half pay until the entire amount was made up. Cook paid Boylan's fare to Detroit, accompanying him as far as Chicago. Ypsilanti people would have known little of the case had it stopped there, but Jake Martin received orders to go to Detroit, arrest him and bring him here. Jake found him without trouble and at noon, Wednesday, he was in the lock-up, where the COMMERCIAL reporter interviewed him. He is an elderly man, medium size, intelligent looking, and does not seem to feel at home behind the bars. He says it is the first time in his life he was ever arrested, and thinks he will be set at liberty Tuesday. We have not heard Mr. Cook's side of the story. If he is arresting him for the same offense, it looks as though he had come a pretty sharp, but mean trick on Boylan. If he had no right to arrest him in the first place, Mr. Boylan has been imposed upon. If he is guilty he is suffering the consequences of his crime, and deserves no sympathy. He ought to have been sharp enough to have stayed in Canada. Tuesday will tell the story.

NORMAL ITEMS.

Mr. S. M. Cumber is visiting the school at Utica this week.

Prof. McLouth is attending a teacher's institute at Hillsdale this week.

It is a query among the students what the future status of the system of students teaching will be with the powers that control the Normal and with educators in general.

The class song of 1880 has been received and will be set to music. It was written by J. N. Mead, of the senior class, and is a very creditable production.

Mr. S. Zimmerman, a student in the medical department of the university called at the Normal on Tuesday. He was formerly a Normalite.

Next Wednesday the members of the senior class will proceed to extract all the enjoyment they can from a basket picnic. A committee of four will make the necessary arrangements. for the occasion.

Quite a number of students attended the Remenyi concert last Tuesday evening. All express themselves as delighted with the wonderful playing of the great master of harmony.

Mr. Frank Hetting of '79 principal of schools at Centerville, has been retained by the School Board for the ensuing year. A substantial evidence of satisfactory work. Mr. Hetting will please accept the congratulations of his Normal friends.

The public exercises of the Zealots society will be held at Normal Hall next Saturday evening June 26th. A good program will be presented. All are invited.

The caucus of the lyceum was not of the Chicago order, and soon put in nomination a full ticket. Mr. James Hettinger and Miss Lena Ewell head the ticket as nominees for president and vice-president. It is intimated that an opposition ticket will enter the field. The election will take place to-day at 10 o'clock.

A good audience assembled at Normal Hall on Friday evening, of last week, to hear Prof. Dickie on "Pluck and Power.." The lecture was an able and eloquent effort, and was listened to with marked attention throughout. At its close a vote of thanks was extended to the Professor by the lyceum.

The public of the Pleiades society was a pleasant and successful affair. Among the most interesting features may be mentioned the essays on the question, "Who was the greatest general? The closing essay being quite unique in conception and treatment of the subject. The violin solo was something new and the audience evinced its approval by an encore. The annoyance of persons leaving the hall during the exercises, was the only thing that marred the pleasure of the occasion.

AN ARABIAN NIGHT AT THE PARK.

Augustin Daly's comedy. An Arabian Night is a modern comedy in four acts, adapted from Van Moser's "Haroun Al Raschid," and neither an Eastern spectacle nor an extravaganza, as many people suppose it to be. The title, "An Arabian Night," is given to the comedy apropos of Mr. Sprinkle's strange fancy for imitating the famous Caliph of the Thousand and One Tales, and the complications arising from its indulgence form the events of the play. This plot, flimsy as it would appear at first sight, is full of opportunities for ridiculous situations, of which the fullest advantage has been taken by the dramatist. The hero, Mr. Sprinkle, meets Rose Maybloom, a circus rider, by accident on the cars, and falls into a harmless flirtrtion with her, paying her fare, and giving her a card with Haroun al Raschid written upon it. Mr. Sprinkle has a mother-in-law of whom he stands in awe. When Rosa calls upon him to thank him for his kindness, his mother-in-law intrudes, and Sprinkle, in despair of making her understand his his explanations, introduces Rose as his niece, who has just orrived from France. The mother-in-law is delighted with the niece, and urges Lafayette Noodle, her own nephew, to propose for this niece of Sprinkle's who is supposed to be very rich. Then the real niece, Kate Sprinkle does arrive from France, and the perplexed hero hurries her off to a hotel opposite. Then his wife returns with a touching story of a man who has followed her from Chicago. The follower turns out to be a romantic artist, who wants to paint Mrs. Sprinkle, and who boards at the same hotel where Sprinkle has bestowed his real niece, Kate and where Signor Berrown, a cannon ball tosser, is discovered with Rosa, who has eloped from the circus with which he is connected. Add to these characters Uncle Major, who gives Sprinkle the good advice to confide in his wife: which advice being followed leads to the general clearing up of all misunderstanding. The fun of the piece, which is more of a farce than a comedy arises from the perplexities of Mr. Sprinkle, the mistakes of every body, and the final overthrow of Mrs. Weebles, the mother-in-law. Thus Mrs. Weebles and Moodle mistake Roas for the real niece, and Kate for the circus rider. Rumbrent, the artist, is mistaken for the cannon ball tosser, and mistakes Kate for the mistress of Mr. Sprinkle. Signior Berrown mistakes Moodle for an opposition athlete and mangles him accordingly. All are playing at cross purposes, and the game is kept up with unflagging energy and spirit, until the audience fairly ache with laughter. The moral is a good one for Sprinkle gets out of all his troubles by telling his wife the truth. The wife is a good one, for she believes all her husband tells her. Kate falls in love with Rumbrent, and bestowes upon him her hand, heart and fortune, in spite of his unjust suspicions. Rosa consents to go off with with Berrown, presumably upon the pretty pony which she rides in act third, to keep her engagement with the circus. Moodle gets a black eye, a broken head, and a lamed leg, all of which he richly neserves. In short, all is happiness and reconciliation when the curtain falls upon a delighted audience and a rattling good piece.

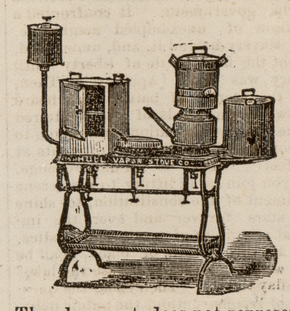
Housekeeper'S
FRIEND.



The above cut does not represent the "House that Jack Built," but shows what some active Yankee genious has brought about to ameliorate the hard lot of the overheated housewife or kitchen maid. It needs but little intelligence to see that it is a Gasoline Stove. To be appreciated it needs to be used but a very few days. For facility of operation, for comfort to the operator, and for light draft on the family exchequer, there is no other stove fit to be named the same day in comparison with it. A few were put into use last season, and created a perfect enthusiasm in the minds and hearts of the women who were fortunate enough to have husbands who were thus mindful of their comfort. We would refer to them here but those gentle ladies might be frightened to see their names in print. We have a full line of the stoves for sale on

REPUBLICAN NOMINATIONS.

For President,
JAMES A. GARFIELD, of Ohio.
For Vice President,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR, of New York.

OUR Democratic friends say that Garfield is a "preacher." Yes, gentlemen, but he has not come to torment you before your time."

James H. Stone, of the Post and Tribune, has been chosen as Michigan's representative in the Republican national committee. Hurrah for Jimmy!

THE Democrats, anxious that their adversaries should nominate Grant were terribly cast down when the nomination of Garfield was made and have been gnawing a file ever since. This disappointment they illy conceal, and already they have brought out their stink-pots with which to fight the Republican nominee.

Well, gentlemen, its four months yet to election, and you had best reserve your fire for the main battle, and prepare yourselves for what for a quarter of a century, you have received at every election—a sound threshing.

CONGRESSMAN Weaver of Iowa, and Gov. Chambers, of Texas, lead the scattered and demoralized greenback cohorts into the yawning abyss of defeat this year.

A terrible disaster occurred this week on Long Island Sound. The Stonington run into the Narragansett, sinking the latter. Over a hundred lives were lost—an appalling calamity.

GEN. Garfield made his home a visit, at Mentor and then went to Washington. He was received grandly by his neighbors and all along the route. He received an ovation at Washington of which any man might well be proud.

SHE SHALL BE PRAISED.—Gen. Garfield said once to a friend: I have been wonderfully blessed in the discretion of my wife. She is one of the coolest and best balanced women I ever saw. She is unstampedable. There has not been one solitary instance in my public career where I suffered in the smallest degree for any remark she ever made. It would have been perfectly natural for a woman often to say something that could be misinterpreted; but without any design, and with the intelligence and coolness of her character, she has never made the slightest mistake that I ever heard of. With the competition that has been against me many times such discretion has been a real blessing.

Gen. Garfield, as chief of staff to Gen. Rosecrans, is thus described by Edmund Kirke in his war book, "Down in Tennessee," written in 1863, and a prediction made as to Garfield's future, which is interesting reading this week:

In a corner by the window, seated at a small pine desk,—a sort of packing-box, perched on a long-legged stool, and divided into pigeon-holes, with a turn-down lid—was a tall, deep-chested, sinewy-built man, with regular, massive features, a full, clear blue eye, slightly dashed with gray, and a high, broad forehead, rising into a ridge over the eyes as if it had been thrown up by a plow. There was something singularly engaging in his open, expressive face, and his whole appearance indicated, as the phrase goes—"great reserve power." His uniform, though cleanly brushed, and sitting easily upon him, had a sort of democratic air, and everything about him seemed to denote that he was "a man of the people." A rusty, slouched hat, large enough to have fitted Daniel Webster, lay on the desk before him, but a glance at that was not needed to convince me that his head had more than the common share of brains. Though he is yet young—not 33—the reader has heard of him, and if he lives he will make his name long remembered in our history.

HONOR TO GARFIELD.

CLEAVELAND, June 12.—Gen. Garfield last night, after an ovation at the Hiram college exercises and receptions at Chardon, Ray Center and Burton, reached his Mentor farm at 10 p. m., after the peaceful villagers had retired. He quietly sought his home, and for the first time since the Monday preceding the Chicago convention enjoyed an undisturned night's rest. This morning he arose early, refreshed, and in a carriage drove around his farm.

GARFIELD'S EARLY LIFE.

In 1849 he took the contract to chop twenty-five cords of wood, and when that was done, he hired out to a boatman upon the Ohio canal as a driver on the tow path, from which position he arose to that of boatman. During his first trip he fell into the canal 13 times and barely escaped drowning as he was unable to swim. A three months' siege of the ague and a mother's entreaties changed his course, and with $17 given him by his mother and older brother he resumed his preparatory studies. This was all the money he received from home. His progress was rapid, and when 18 years old he began to teach. His clothing was poor, and one day while in his school his pants, being so thin over his knees, to his chagrin were torn open. The lady with whom he boarded sent him to bed while her boy brought down his pants, and carefully darned the rent in the nether garments of the next President of the United States. By 1854 young Garfield, by close application to study and by working mornings, evenings and Saturdays to pay his way, had gone as far as the high schools and academies of his region could take him. The struggling boy had developed into a self-reliant young man of twenty-three. He entered Williams College in Massachusetts in 1854 and graduated in 1856 with the honors of his class. He subsequently became a teacher and President of Hiram College in Ohio.

In the language of the polititians, the nomination of Mr. Garfield is a strong one—an uncommonly strong one.

GARFIELD'S SPEECH NOMINATING SHERMAN.

The nomination of Gen. Garfield gives peculiar interest to the speech in which on Saturday night last he nominated John Sherman for the presidency, producing an effect upon his audience which undoubtedly led to his own nomination. The following is its full text:

Gen. Garfield—Mr. President, I have witnessed the extraordinary scenes of this convention with deep solicitude. No emotion touches my heart more quickly than a sentiment in honor of a great and noble character. But as I sat on these seats and witnessed these demonstrations, it seemed to me you were a human ocean in a tempest. I have seen the sea lashed into fury and tossed into a spray, and its grandeur moves the soul of the dullest man. But I remember that it is not the billows but the calm level of the sea from which all heights and depths are measured. [Applause.] When the storm has passed and the hour of calm settles on the ocean, when sunlight bathes its smooth surface, then the astronomer and surveyor takes the level from which he measures all terrestrial heights and depths. [Applause] Gentlemen of the convention, your present temper may not mark the healthy pulse of our people. When our enthusiasm has passed, when the emotions of this hour have subsided, we shall find the calm level of public opinion, below the storm, from which the thoughts of a mighty people are to be measured, and by which their final action will be determined. [Applause.] Not here, in this brilliant circle where 15,000 men and women are assembled is the destiny of the Republic to bedecreed ["That is so"]; not here where I see the onthusiastic faces of 756 delegates waiting to cast their votes into the urn and determine the choice of their party; [applause] but by 4,000,000 Republican firesides, where the thoughtful fathers, with wives and children about them, with the calm thoughts inspired by love of home and love of country, with the history of the past, the hopes of the future, and the knowledge of the great men who have adorned and blessed our nation in days gone by—there God prepares the verdict that shall determine the wisdom of our work to-night [applause]. Not in Chicago in the heat of June, but in the sober quiet that comes betwren now and November, in the silence of deliberate judgment, will this great question be settled. [Cries of good.] Let us aid them to night. [Great applause.] But now, gentlemen of the convention, what do we want? [A voice, "Garfield."] Bear with me a moment. Hear me for this cause, and, for a moment, be silent that you may hear. [Cries of "Good."] Twenty-five years ago this republic was wearing a triple chain of bondage. Long familiarity with traffic in the bodies and souls of men had paralyzed the consciences of a majority of our people. The baleful doctrine of state sovereignty had shocked and weakened the noblest and most beneficent powers of the national government, and the grasping power of slavery was seizing the virgin territories of the west and dragging them into the den of eternal bondage. At that crisis the Republican party was born. It drew its first inspiration from that fire of liberty which God has lighted in every man's heart, and which all the powers of ignorance and tyranny can never wholly extingnish [applause]. The Republican party came to deliver and save the republic. It entered the arena when the beleagured and assailed territories were struggling for freedom, and drew around the sacred circle of liberty which the demon of slavery has never dared to cross. It made them free forever. [Great applause and cries of "Good."] Strengthened by its victory on the frontier, the young party under the leadership of that great man who, on this spot twenty years ago was made its leader, entered the national capital and assumed the high duties of the government. [Applause] The light which shone from its banner dispelled the darkness in which slavery had enshrouded the capital and melted the shackles of every slave, and consumed, in the fire of liberty, every slave pen within the shadow of the capitol. Our national industries, by and impoverishing policy, were themselves prostrated, and the streams of revenue flowed in such feeble currents that the treasury itself was well night empty. The money of the people was the wretched notes of 2,000 uncontrolled and irresponsible state banking corporations, which were filling the country with a circulation that poisoned rather than sustained the life of business. [Loud applause.] The Republican party changed all this. It abolished the babel of confusion and gave the country a currency as national as its flag, based upon the sacred faith of the people. [Applause.] It threw its protecting arm around our great industries, and they stood erect as with new life. It filled with the spirit of true nationality all the great functions of the government. It confronted a rebellion of unexampled magnitude, with slavery behind it, and, under God, fought the final battle of liberty until victory was won. [Applause.] Then, after the storms of battle, were heard the sweet calm words of peace uttered by the conquering nation, and saying to the conquered foe that lay prostrate at its feet: "This is our only revenge, that you join us in lifting to the serene firmament of the constitution, to shine like stars forever and ever, the immortal principles of truth and justice, that all men, white or black, shall be free and stand equal before the law." [Loud applause.] Then came the questions of reconstruction, the public debt, and the public faith. In the settlement of these questions the Republican party has completed its twenty five years of glorious existence, and it has sent us here to prepare it for another lustrum of duty and of victory. How shall we do this great work? We can not do it, my friends, by assailing our Republican brethren. [Great applause and cries of "good"]

God forbid that I should say one word to cast a shadow upon any name on the roll of our heroes. This coming fight is our Thermopylæ. We are standing upon a narrow isthmus. If our Spartan hosts are united, we can withstand all all the Persians that the Xerxes of Democracy can bring against us. Let us hold our ground this one year, for the stars in their courses fight for us in the future. The census to be taken this year will bring reinforcements and continued power. [Applause].

But in order to win this victory now, we want the vote of every Republican, of every Grant Republican and every anti-Grant Republican in America [great applause,] of every Blaine man and every anti-Blaine man. The vote of every follower of every candidate is needed to make our success certain [applause]; therefore, I say gentlemen and brethren, we are here to take calm counsel together, and inquire what we shall do. [A voice "Nominate Garfield." Great applause.] We want a man whose life and opinions embody all the achievements of which I have spoken. We want a man who, standing on a mountain height, sees all the achievements of our past history, and carries in his heart the memory of all its glorious deeds, and who, looking forward, prepares to meet the labor and the dangers to come. We want one who will act in no spirit of unkindness toward those we lately met in battle. The Republican party offers to our brethren of the south the olive branch of peace, and wishes them to return to brotherhood, on this supreme condition that it shall be admitted, forever and forever more, that, in the war for the Union, we were right and they were wrong. [Cheers].

On that supreme condition we meet them as brethren, and on no other. We ask them to share with us the blessings and honors of this great republic. [Applause]. Now, gentlemen, not to weary you, I am about to present a name for your consideration—the name of a man who was the comrade and associate and friend of nearly all those noble dead whose faces look down upon us from these walls to night [cheers], a man who began his career of public service twenty-five years ago, whose first duty was courageously done in the days of peril on the plains of Kansas, when the first red drops of that bloody shower began to fall which finally swelled into the deluge of war. [Cheers]. He bravely stood by young Kansas then, and, returning to his duty in the national legislature, through all subsequent time his pathway has been marked by labors performed in every department of legislation. You ask for his monuments. I point you to twenty-five years of national statutes. [Cheers]. Not one great beneficent statute has been placed in our statute books without his intelligent and powerful aid. [Cheers.] He aided these men to formulate the laws that raised our great armies and carried us through the war. His hand was seen in the workmanship of those statutes that restored and brought back the unity and married calm of the states. His hand was in all that great legislation that created the war currency, and in a still greater work that redeemed the promises of the government, and made the currency equal to gold. And when at last called from the halls of legislation into a high executive office, he displayed that experience, intelligence, firmness and poise of character which has carried us through a stormy period of three years. With one-half the public press crying "crucify him," and a hostile congress seeking to prevent success, in all this he remained unmoved until victory crowned him. [Applause.]

The great fiscal affairs of the nation and the great business interests of the country he has guarded and preserved, while executing the law of resumption and effecting its object without a jar and against the false prophecies of one half of the press and all the Democracy of this continent.]Applause.] He has shown himself able to meet with calmness the great emergencies of the government for twenty-five years. He has trodden the perilous heights of public duty and against all the shafts of malice has borne his breast unharmed. He has stood in the blaze of "that fierce light that beats against the throne," but its fiercest ray has found no flaw in his armor, no stain on his shield. I do not present him as a better Republican or as a better man than thousands of others we honor, but I present him for your deliberate consideration. I nominate John Sherman of Ohio. [Great applause.

POLITICAL SLIPS.

Not the least of Garfield's honors is the fact that he is the Republican leader in the House. No machine work can maintain a man in that position.

Gen Garfield is not a rich man. Mentor is scarcely more than a crossroads, and his farm is a small one. When at home he does his own plowing.

Gen. Aathur, like Garfield; is a student, and a man who believes that every American citizen, young and old, should bear his part of the political burden.

The county committee which sees to it that its local Republican papers and the Campaign Post and Tribune are generally circulated among their voters will "organize victory."—Post and Tribune.

Here is our candidate. It is his distinguished fortune to be this day a Representative in congress, a senator elect and a presidential nominee.

Gen. Rosecrans's official report of the battle of Chickamauga says: "Gen. Garfield proceeded to the front." That has become a confirmed habit of his.

The men who stood by Gen. Grant in the late canvass and in the National Convention are designated everywhere as the "Old Guard." They will pass into the political history of the time under that title, and they will deserve it."—Inter-Ocean.

Garfield cannot carry any Southern state.—Dem, exchange. He stands pretty well in West Virginia, with chances that some other Southern states will fall in love with him before the campaign is over.

BEAUTY'S BAIT.

A treasury girl went fishing one day,
She had a fine form for a hook;
She soon had a bite, and pulling away,
Pulled a Senator out from the brook.

But when she had landed him safe on the bank,
And had given the matter due thought,
The treasury girl was firmly impressed
That 'twas she, not the fish, who was caught.

She meditates over the match;
And as she's not blessed with a mother-in law,
She thinks it's an excellent catch.

At least from the tackle she's free;

BETSY BROWN PREACHES A SERMON ON RELIGION AND THEN VISITS A THEATRE.

I'm in awful trouble. It's been on my mind for some time. I've tried to live above it, but I guess it will be the death of me yet. If I'd only known thirty years ago what I do now I might a' put a stop to it, but I'm afraid it's everlastin'ly too late when a child gets as old as Bill is. Some folks think children 's a blessin', but I tell you a poor lone widow can't bring up boys as a man can. Bill is a pretty good boy in the main, but he gets contrary streaks that come nigh upsettin' me. For instance, he would get married when anybody knows I'm a dreadful sight better house keeper than that poky old maid he married! Then he got the base ball fever and like to smashed his head in, to say nothin' of havin' all his fingers knocked to pieces. He's had the western fever, too, just as if Kinderhook wasn't good enough for Bill Brown, when his poor father was perfectly contented to live and die here! But this last trouble beats the whole. "What is it," did you say? Why, as sure as you live, Bill ain't orthodox!

After all the bringin' up he's had, with a minister for a great-grandfather, too, I can't see into it. There was the captain, my husband; he was always strict about goin' to meetin.' I have seen men who seemed to think 'twas doin' their whole duty if they let their wives go to church regular; but Captain Brown never could see it right to worship God by proxy! It always made him feel awful bad to see so many more women than men in the meetn' house. Why, I remember goin' to a service once and the minister he got up and led off with, "Dearly beloved brethren," when as sure as you live there wasn't a man in the buildin', only half a dozen women! I don't say the women don't need salvation, by no means; I could point out several that need lots of it.

But the men ain't perfect quite yet. As a rule they are harder to catch in the gospel net, and they don't stay caught. They act like a fish out of water—that is, some of 'em. Bill was once a member of the church, and behaved good; as well as most of 'em. But he's back-slid. It didn't come on all at once, but little by little—kinder gradual like. Begun askin' questions: that's bad, you know. We ought to have faith that it's all right, then it will be! Bill won't go to meetin' and that's always bad, too. I says to Mis Robinson the other day, says I:

"Where do you expect your husband will go to when he dies?"

"Why, Mis Brown," says she, "how you talk. What do you mean?"

"I mean just this: Here you go to meetin'—steady, and belong, too, and try to do your duty, and your husband don't go with you, nor seem to care for that sort of thing. What's goin' to become of him when he can't live any longer in his sin?"

"Mis Brown, if there's a man on earth who does his best duty it's John Robinson. He was never known to cheat a man, rich or poor; he was never known to lend money at big interest to build a big church with; he was never known to refuse the hungry or needy; he was never known to refuse a poor widow and her little ones the help she needed; he was never even suspected of a little contemptible underhanded action. He is a kind husband, father, friend and neighbor, and I must say he's about as worthy of heaven as any of 'em."

"But, Mis Robinson, he don't belong to the church; that makes all the difference in the world. Why don't he come out and make a profession?"

"Well, Mis Brown, for my part I'd rather he'd stay as he is than to profess what he can't stick to. A hypocrite I despise, and though I ain't goin' to set up as a judge, I do say there's lots of men in the churches that ain't half as good Christians as John Robinson."

"I know all you say is just so, but there's so much the more need of his putting on the cap sheaf and bein' a shinin' example to others. There's Bill, now. If his nearest neighbor had been all right who can tell what might have been? May be he might be an orthodox yet instead of going off to that dreadful Unitarian meetin'. What there is there to draw him I can't see."

"Why as to that, Mis B., I ain't so bigoted as some. I say live and let live. Let everybody go accordin' to their light The Unitarians are just startin', and if they succeed will go on to better things."

"Well, well, it's come to a pretty pass when you, a good pious Methodist woman, can talk in such a way as that about new fangled religions. Next thing I know you'll be reading Bob Ingersoll and goin' to the theater. I most wish you had gone with me the other night out to Batavia Center."

"Mis Brown, I don't think it's any reason why I should go to a theater because you do. It isn't consistent."

"Why, Mis Robinson, it didn't cost me a cent! I never go when I have to pay. I'm sure that's consistent! I think I know my duty, Mis Robinson. I'm goin' home now."

"Don't be in a hurry, Mis Brown. I didn't mean to hurt you're feelin's. Stay till tea and tell us about the show out to Batavia,"

"No, I guess Jane will be waitin', so I'll go,"

"Why, we're goin' to have warm fritters and new maple molasses for supper if you'll stay. Come, now."

So I staid, though you needn't think I cared for the fritters!

But I must tell you what a good time I had out to the Batavia show They called it a drama—The Charcoal Burner. And wasn't he a sight! Seems to me I'd a fixed myself up a little—washed my face and hands, anyhow—before folks in that style! The rest of the players knew enough to dress up when they had company. But the way they carried on was a caution, I tell you. They killed and courted—fired pistols right at each other—then kissed and hugged somebody else to make up. The charcoal burner was so bad—not to say dirty—no woman could go near him; but that young soldier; every one of the females was after him. If he had been as Old's I am I don't know but I'd a fallen in love with him myself! That fellow that talked about "the statues of William and Mary" was dreadful cute. Had a jug of beer—which was bad. I never drink beer—Porter is better—and got a poor man drunk, then took him home in a wheelbarrow—dreadful shacklin' old thing 'twas, too; no wonder the poor man called on his dead wife. If she could 'a seen him, she'd shed a Pitcher full of tears over him. It's a wonder Barbara Jones could stand such goin's on and not Grumble. "Little Pitchers have big ears," and maybe she used her's better than I did mine, especially when the soldier made believe he was goin' to marry her. As far as I could see he hadn't the least idea of such a thing; but she was just fool enough to believe everything a man told. My verdict would have been that she shouldn't have any husband at all after flirtin' in that way. But it all come out right at last and everybody was happy.

After that a girl got up and said some verses, "Don't Leave the Old Folks, Tom." 'Twas real splendid. Why, it seemed to me as if Tom couldn't go after she talked that affectin' way to him. And he didn't. He settled right down to home, married Lucy Grey, and took care of the old folks. That's the way my Bill does by me.

After the verses came a song, "I'm poor, but a gentleman still." Poor! I guess you'd think so. Why, I've seen a tramp with a sight better clothes! But he sung his piece awful good.

Next thing would 'a been against the law in Coldwater, but they don't arrest auctioneers in Batavia, not even if their goods are "a bad lot" or an "odd lot!" That Hammer had a sound as though it was made of Burch timber, and Becky was some relation, I reckon, though she tried hard to catch him. One fellow got to performin' small tricks and broke a plate, I was glad 'twasn't a Pitcher. Well; they come out all right, too, and then the show was done. I forgot to say anything about the music. That was so good some wanted to dance; and the men folks got to beatin' time with their feet on the floor so loud that I was dreadful afraid that the poor babies might wake up and cry! so affectin' it is to hear babies cry for half an hour, steady pull, at twelve o'clock at night, too! Oh, my heart aches for 'em always. Indeed, any one who is put upon or abused in any way has the sympathy of Betsey Brown.

THE PRESENT, PAST AND FUTURE.

When we see mismatched couples we wonder at it, but do not consider that the world is full of such enigmas that one who looks around observantly may find them by the score, and that no one has ever been sage enough to solve for us the least of them. They are a part of that great mystery that we call life, that burden of sore doubt and misunderstanding of perplexed meanings and concealed purposes—that only eternity can make clear to the puzzled soul.

It is said that marriages are made in Heaven, but if that is the case, when the parties reach earth they must accidentally change places with some other one, which may account for the failure. A good woman may attach herself to a bad man; she may even love him very dearly and yet retain much of her purer, better nature even though she come in daily contact with his impure life. It is of course a sad and humiliating lot. She cannot be dependent on him for the position she holds in society; she cannot rely upon him for protection and support; she cannot look up to him with reverence; she cannot render him obedience.

SLIPS.

The wheat crop, according to reports from various places, will be the largest harvested for many years.

A christian church is not a Sunday club—where well dressed people meet to enjoy music and rhetoric on the Lord's Day.—Bishop Lee.

Victoria will complete the 43d year of her reign June 20. This is longer than any English sovereign has ruled except Henry III., who was king 56 years; Edward III., who reigned 50 years; Queen Elizabeth, 45 years, and George III., 69 years.

When the result of the battle at Chicago was known some of the delegates sent the following dispatch to the president of Williams college — Garfield's alma mater:

CHICAGO, June 8—To Rev. P. A. Chadbourne, Willismstown, N. Y.—Glory to God, Williams, and to Garfield.

The man who decides to go into a new country empty-handed, or nearly so, must decide to scratch the first five years, rub the next five, and dig the next five.

A western paper says that at the Roman Catholic university of Notre Dame in Indiana one-half the students are Protestants, and in the seminary of St. Mary's, a girls' school connected with that university, only one-third of the pupils are Catholics.

Bishop Selwyn interested himself much in the poor, especially in miners. One day coming on a company of the latter, he heard them talking in a very animated way, so loudly that he said to them: "My friends, something seems to interest you all very much; may I inquire what it is?" They replied: "You see that copper tea-kettle there? We found it, and were just saying that the one who could tell the biggest lie should have it." "Oh," said the bishop, "I am sorry for that; I hope you will never again tell lies. 'Tis a fearful habit, and so unmanly. Why, I never told a lie in my life." Whereupon the four miners shouted in one breath: "Give the governor the tea-kettle!" all of them thinking his assertion "the biggest lie" they had ever heard.

Scene from a police court in Sacramento: The Judge—"Bill Sheets, you are charged with burglary. Are you guilty?" "Sure, yer 'onor. an' if it's gooilthy I am, do yez thinks I be afther tellin' ov it? I pleads not gooilthy," was the response of Bill. "All right," said the judge, and turning to one of the most eminent members of the bar, said: You will please act as counsel for the defendant." At this the prisoner turned and calmly surveyed the placid countenance of his champion, and then addressed the Court as follows: "Sure, an' if it's that yez afhter givin' me a loiyer I pleads gooilthy, and be done with it at once." Then as he turned and pointed to the robust form of a youthful member of the bar, he continued: "But if yoill give me him as what is foine loiyer, oill plade not gooilthy." The prisoner was allowed his choice of counsel.—New York Tribune.

Of Mrs. John Sherman this anecdote, said to be current in Mansfield, is told by the Cleaveland Herald: While a girl at school she became engaged one day in talking to several companions on the subject of marriage. One of the number told what she would do in case she were married. This brought out expressions from all the party, and when the future Mrs. Sherman's turn came she simply said: "It will be my aim to make my husband as much of a man as he can be."

A writer in the June Scribner who seems to speak by authority says that the only known contribution to the Kansas exodus relief fund by any man engaged in politics was $100 sent by Vice-President Wheeler. It is also said that not a dollar of public funds has been expended in any way for the colored immigrants in Kansas. Not a single colored tramp was seen in Kansas all winter, says this writer, "and only one colored person was convicted of crime."

INDIAN DEPREDATION.—The fair reader shudders when she thinks of the settler's wife watching, from the door of her rude hut, the retreating form of her husband going out to his daily labor—going out perhaps to return not again, for before nightfall a savage hand may have laid him low among the prairie grasses. Or it may be a child, a bright-eyed daughter, is snatched away in an unguarded moment, to grace the next war dance. When we read the heartrending details of these savage depredations, we are apt to blame the government for not taking more strict precautions to insure the settler's protection. But we daily read of the depredations of that arch-fiend, consumption, with scarcely a thought of the terrible inroads it is making in human life. Tens of thousands of homes are annually desolated by consumption to one by Indian outrage. Like the Indian, consumption oftecest comes stealthily, and no danger is apprehended until the victim suddenly finds himself hopelessly ensnared, and death's fatal arrow ends the scene. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a powerful alterative, or blood-purifier, and tonic, has restored thousands of consumptives who had tried every other remedy recommended to them, without obtaining any relief, and are willing to testify to its remedial powers

HAPPILY DISAPPOINTED.—Disappointments are frequently grevious to bear, but having received letters almost daily from parties who have been "happily disappointed" we relate their experience which will be profitable for every one to remember. Thousands have written to the proprietors of Kendall's Spavin Cure, stating that they began using it without any faith that it would cure spavins, but had been happily disappointed as it had completely cured the spavin and removed the bunch without blistering, and after using it for variou purposes, all state freely that they find it the very best liniment ever used for any lameness on beast or man. Please read the advertisement for Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Live Long and be Happy.

Why should not everyone live out their full allotted time, enjoy good health and be happy? Surely there is no good reason, and many will allow impure blood, weakness of the kidneys, imperfect digestion, and urinary troubles to undermine and break down their general health, and carry them to a premature grave. Some seek relief in mineral poisons, in pill form, etc., others resort to extensively advertised alcoholic beverages and fermented liquors, only to feel themselves for a time somewhat better, but after a while, much worse. Now why should this be so? It is well known by the intelligent portion of our community that Dr. Guysott's Yellow Dock and Sarsaparilla will surely remove all these disorders. This remedy is the wonderful discovery of an eminent French physician, and has proven in thousands of instances to be the best vegetable blood purifier known to medical men. It never fails to effectually cure Scrofula, Syphilitic disorders, weakness of the kidneys, all nervous disorders and debility, and all urinary and digestive troubles. It makes the old feel full of youthful vigor, and the young energetic and gay, restoring perfect manhood and womanhood, especially when the disease has a tendency to weaken the mind, body, and nervous system. Do not despair. A single bottle will convince you of its great merit as a health renewer for it begins at once to give new life and new vigor to both body and mind, never failing to remove all symptons of any and every disease that can be cured by cleansing, renovating, purifying and strengthening the human system, driving out, as by magic, the many ills that flesh and blood is heir to, and building up new health, new vigor, and new life. Large quart bottle, $1 00. Have your druggist get this excellent preparation for you—take no other. 845-1yr.

Be Wise in Time.

It is a fact well known by almost all intelligent families that Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Chery has cured more bases of Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, etc., than any any other physician's prescriptions ever compounded. It releives, as if by magic, all soreness and irritation of throat and lungs. It is quieting and soothing in its effect, and is unexcelled as a general tonic. Keep a bottle always on hand. A few doses never fail to cure an ordinary rough or cold. Price of large pint bottles, $1.00. Have your druggist get you this wonderful cure—take no other, 8451y

It is folly to endure unnecssary pain when an inexpensive, highly recommended and long-tested remedy, like Thomas' Eclectric Oil, will stop it. As an outward balsam for rheumatism, abrasions and sores; or taken internally for a cough, hoarseness, or a cold on the chest, it has no peer. Our advertisement describes it more fully. Note—Eclectric, selected and electrized.

HONORED AND BLEST.—When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies, the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were skeptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.—Democratic.

YPSILANTI TOWN.

Last Sunday morning about 9 o'clock the barn of A. R. Graves about there miles south of this city was struck by lightning, killing one horse and injuring two others making them very deaf, the damage to the barn was not extensive.

In spite of the ravages of the cut worm and the complaint of too much rain the corn crop is coming along finely.

The stray cattle that disappeared from the custody of Overseer Ruthruff so mysteriously one night last week, were found last Saturday in the woods south of Bellville in Wayne Co. and brought back, so that the owner would know where they were. Mr. Ruthruff will keep watch of the animals hereafter.

LAKE SUPERIOR NEWS.

L'ANSE, MICH., June 1st, 1880.

Ed. Commercial:

Thinking an item from this "hyperborean region" might have a trifle of interest to some of your readers, I give you the benefit, or inflict upon them the penalty, of a few leisure moments.

I left Detroit on the evening of the 8th, on the floating palace "City of Cleveland," in a gentle shower, one of the many which have been so prevalent this spring. The "City" is a ship of no ordinary speed, or of mean behavior in a gale, of both of which excellent qualities she gave those who were passengers on this trip the best of evidence.

Between Marquette and this place, which part of the voyage was in the night, enveloped in fog, we were overtaken by a fierce thunder storm and gale of wind. Our vessel was headed to the wind, and although she trembled in every joint from the force of the rising sea and the wild winds that howled through and around her, yet she rode it out like the sea bird that sports upon the crest of the summer wave. The cold weather of this summer has been prolific of fogs on the northern lakes, rendering navigation more or less dangerous. But there is a greater and a needless danger that attends most of the steamers, and one that I am surprised that the owners of steamboats do not see their interest to that extent that they do not exclude all intoxicating drinks from their boats. I recently learned from an employe that when the fearful accident happened to the Meteor and Pewabie, the man at the Meteor's wheel was drunk! hence the accident. Bars on steamboats are the fruitful cause of many of the appalling calamities which shock the public from time to time, and I would not be surprised if the latest Narraganset horror would show the master and pilot to be patrons of the bar.

Overcoats have been in request every day I have been here, and this morning we had a sharp white frost. Our townsman, W. P. Beach, is making arrangements for a blast furnace on his land at Huron bay. G. W. L.

CREAM OF THE TEMPERANCE SPEECHES AT ANN ARBOR.

Every man wants to be able to send his boy out upon the street without his being tempted at every turn by the allurements of a saloon. He referred to politics, and said there wasn't a pothouse politician but was opposed to temperance principles. The rum seller wants authority to break the laws, and power to make widows and orphans; he wants legal authority to convert our sons into tramps and paupers; to rob the women of life, and love, and home; to increase crime and make the public laws and morals unsafe. They propose to take the thing out of party politics, but to take it into the parties, and make them see and recognize the justice of their principles. Speaking of the liquor dealers' principles he asked what they were, and stated that they had none but the whisky barrel. He then asked party men what they thought about the salvation of their sons? Had not their children's salvation ought to be paramount to everything else? They must bring this thing home and look at it as individuals, as parents; never mind the state or county, they would take care of themselves, and Washtenaw county especially, he thought when the time comes for her to do so.—Capt. Bontecue.

This seemed to be a spontaneous outpouring of the people, and he thought that this immense crowd bid defiance to the assertion that the temperance flag would be trailed in the dust as long as they all lived. He thought it high time for action when the whisky men publicly proclaimed their intention to buy up the legislature. Let the two causes bring out their array of followers, let their opponents go to the poor houses, the jails, the workhouses, the insane asylums and bring out their victims and the comparison with the temperance people, the ministers, the professors, the Christian women and mothers, and that alone would decide which of the two were in the right, and he invited a comparison any time. We ask no party's allegiance and no politicians favor; the temperance people were a power in the land and proposed to make that power felt; what they wanted was a submission of this prohibition question to the people by the legislature, and no man shall receive their vote for that body in either party unless he does so pledge himself; all they asked was the voice of the people upon this accursed traffic. He said that a liquor man had told him that they would have a majority of the next legislature if they had to pay $1,000 a piece for them. That was a glowing tribute to the honor of legislators, that they could be so bought up Their opponents had taken their cause into politics and there proposed to fight it out, and the speaker desired the temperance men to meet them face to face.—R. E. Frazer.

Whatever is for the universal good is in the nature of things good, the law of God upholds it, and the laws of man should uphold it; whatever is not for the universal good is in the nature of things bad, the law of God condemns it, and the law of man should condemn it. The last legislature was petitioned by 100,000 of our citizens, the largest number ever before known, to submit this subject to the people, but it was not done. Michigan is a temperance state. She has too many school houses, too many religious people, too many spires point heavenward from her churches, for her sentiments to be other than temperance sentiments. The people want the opportunity to vote upon this question. We will meet our opponents at every point, with arguments and upon the stump, in every public hall and in every school district of the state, if we can but have the opportunity; and if this question be but once decided by the people it will be decided once and forever.—J. Webster Childs.

There are thousands and tens of thousands of men in Michigan who believe the organic law of the state should be changed so as to prohibit the sale of liquor and lager beer. If it should be voted upon we must of course submit to it. If it should be carried we must see that prohibition is enforced. Upon this question you will be obliged to take sides, and if you are a temperance man and act indifferently the people will have the right to think that you are in the interest of the liquor dealers. The liquor men propose to carry the election this fall so that the question of a constitutional amendment, prohibiting the sale of liquor and beer, shall not be submitted to the people. These men are well engaged for carrying on the fight, and it is for us to meet them on their own ground. To-day we stand face to face with these men whose business they claim is being interfered with. When we look upon a business that puts its eye upon the child, that lays its hand upon him when he has reached manhoods estate; that causes poverty and crime to stalk through the land, that causes death to follow in its train, I say that something should be done to exterminate such a traffic. The powers of hell, supplanted by the liquor dealers, will not prevail against us in this great battle of reform. For one, I am in favor of hearing the people say whether we shall liquor up or liquor down. —Capt. E. P. Allen.

Congressman Newberry says of Garfield:

For the last year and a half I have had the pleasure of seeing him daily in scenes of calm deliberation, amid noisy and stormy hours, when men's passions were approaching the moment of uncontrollable outbreak. I have seen him with a few judicious words calm the storm and point the way to peace and quiet. He is a born ruler of men, and a ruler by force and power of intellect. He is and always has been a poor man. He is the owner of the farm where is his home in Mentor, Ohio, and $20,000 will cover all his worldly wealth. His character and integrity are unquestioned his habits of life unexceptionable; his domestic life, blessed with wife and children, is and will be an example to be followed.

I heard the words in a rich, manly voice, "I don't know where in —— to go." The voice was mellow, even musical, in its intonation. I turned and tried to see the fellow's face, but they were all in the shadow, and so I passed on, wondering if there was reading room in all that large city where the evening could be pleasantly and profitably spent. Coming from an entertainment that evening very near 11 o'clock. I noticed very brilliantly lighted windows in the third floor of a rather imposing building. After some inquiries I learned that the gleaming lights were from a billiard hall. "And that gloomy looking place underneath," I asked, "what is that?" "O," the answer came, "that is the library." "Closed at 10, is it?" I further asked. "Yes," the answer came, with a perceptible sneer, "at about 10 last Saturday night, and its gas will be turned on again next Saturday night, but not until then," and my informant continued: "Gertie, do you think that is right?" Well, I hadn't thought enough about the subject then to answer, but I have thought about it since, and my ultimatum is, that to lock up 18,000 volumes six evenings out of seven, when there are hundreds of worthy, deserving men and women who would like to read them, and who need the information and recreation they could give, is decidely wrong. As the subject was one in which I found much that was entertaining after taking it up I made several inquiries, and, among other things, learned that the library used to be open Tuesday and Saturday evenings, but in order to retrench the gas bill it was decided to close the library Tuesday evenings.—Free Press.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The Religious Herald tells how a little girl expressed her belief that she was a christian as follows:

"Were you a sinner," asked an old deacon, "before this change of which you speak?" "Yes, sir," she replied. "Well, are you now a sinner?" "Yes, sir, I feel I am a greater sinner than ever." "Then," continued the deacon, "what change can there be in you?" "I don't know how to explain it," she said; "but, I used to be a sinner running after sin, and now I hope I am a sinner running from sin." They received her, and for many years she was a bright and shining light. Now she lives where there is no sin to run from.

No such exciting scene has ever occurred in a Republican convention as that which was enacted in the midst of Storr's address in behalf of Illinois sitting members early this morning. The memorable scene at the convention in the old Front street theater, Baltimore, when Brownlow urged the nomination of Johnson in the name of the persecuted southern loyalists, was a tame affair compared to this. It was bedlum broke loose. Men on their feet, on the seats, moved their heads, tossed their arms, and screamed. It was a cunning effort to carry in the Logan case on the crest of a roar. The Blaine men quickly detected the ruse, and then began a battle of lungs that defies description. In the midst of it "Rally Round the Flag" sprang out of New York delegation, and well-dressed men danced and yelled like Comanches on the war path, as they sung it. The Blaine men answered with "John Brown's body," and thunder until the delegates, panting with excitement, resumed their seats.

Whatever may be said to the discredit of the Republican party, it must be allowed that during twenty years' sailing upon dangerous seas it has encountered extraordinary good fortune and displayed unusual skill in emergencies. The nomination of Garfield is an inspiration. In no other direction, through no other channel, could the Chicago convention—driven about by the crossroads of interest and beaten by an ever increasing flood of passion—have found, if not safety, at least escape, from the immediate perils of the storm.

But you want to learn something of his home life. Well, the general is a home man in the fullest sense of the the word. He rises early in the morning to get his enjoyment in the cool of the day. He mounts his horse and goes about the farm directing the workmen and seeing where improvements can be made. But sometimes he throws off his coat and holds the plow or rakes hay, and it does him worlds of good. Of course he has a large amount of correspondence, and, as he has no clerk with him here, he is compelled to attend to it all himself. This takes up much of his time. He never writes his speeches except when he makes some set speech on political or legislative matters of great importance and then he applies himself until the task is finished. The general takes great interest in the little affairs of our little village, attending the Disciples' church up here and speaking some times.—Mrs. Garfield.

The nomination of Garfield is a surprise and a shock to the Democrats. They had hoped to fight a Republican party burdened with the fatal weight of third-termery. They now find they have to face a party consolidated, harmonized and enthused by a providential nomination. This new and appalling Democratic situation renders the nomination of Tilden an impossibility, except on the assumption that all the members of the Cincinnati Convention go crazy.

I like the nomination of Gen. Garfield, not because he is an uncommon man, but because he is a common man [Applause.] I like his nomination because it is the voice of the people. [Applause.] I like it because there was no machinery about it. [Loud and long continued applause and cheers.] I like it because the office sought the man, and not the man the office. [Applause.]—James F. Joy.

The Republicans have nominated for President a man who has a record in civil affairs, and the Democrats are working in it with great assiduity. They find that Garfield has made speeches on all subjects of general interest, that he has talked about the tariff and the Chinese, and was one of the visiting statesmen in Louisiana, a member of the Electoral Commission, and mixed up in matters innumerable.—Cincinnati Commercial.

The Hon. E. P. Allen said that, while Michigan was primarily for Blaine, it was in fact for any other candidate to beat the third term. Mr. Garfield he believed to be the man for the hour—a candidate upon whom all the conflicting elements in the Republican party could and would combine.—Chicago Daily's.

The election in Oregon not only wrests that state from the Democrats and gives it to the Republicans, but elects a Republican congressman to the next congress in place of a Democrat, a republican gain of one on the first election for the next house. This is an auspicious opening of the Republican campaign of 1880.

One of the salient points of Gen. Garfield's strength is thus stated by the Springfield Republican:

No man of equal scholarship has been nominated for the presidency probably since John Quincy Adams. He was once found in his library "resting from overwork" by looking up the biography of Horace. Spofford the librarian of congress is quoted as saying of a rare book "you will find it on such a shelf; is it is not there either Sumner or Garfield has it." Powers thus trained, Garfield brings to bear on every subject which comes under his hand in the work of legislation.

ABOUT ADVERTISING.

If you have goods to sell, advertise.

Hire a man with a lampblack kettle and a brush to paint your name and number on all the railroad fences. The cars go whizzing by so fast that no one can read them, to be sure, but perhaps the obliging conductor would stop the train to accommodate an inquisitive passenger.

Remember the fences by the roadside as well. Nothing is so attractive to the passer by as a well painted sign: "Millington's medical mixture for mumps."

Have your card in the hotel register by all means. Strangers stopping at hotels for a night generally buy a cigar or two before they leave town, and they need some inspiriting literary food besides.

If an advertising agent wants your business apvertised in a fancy frame at the depot, pay him about 200 per cent more than it is worth, and let him put it there. When a man has three-quarters of a second in which to catch a train, he invariably stops to read depot advertisments, and your card might take his eye.

Of course the street thermometer dodge is excellent. When a man's fingers and ears are freezing, or he is puffing and "phewing" at the heat, is the time above all others when he reads an advertisement.

Print in the blackest ink a great sprawling card on all your wrapping paper. Ladies returning from a shopping tour like to be walking bulletins, and if the ink rubs off and spoils some of their finery, no matter. They never will stop at your store again.

Have a few posters pasted all over town mixed up with nigger minstrel streamers and theatrical bills; they will appear very prominent and attract about as much attention as a black spot on a speckled dog.

Have thousands of little dodgers printed and hire a few boys to distribute them. You've no idea how the junk dealer and paper rag man will respect you.

Don't fail to advertise in every circus program. It will help the circus to pay its bills, and visitors can relieve the tedium of the clown's jokes by looking over your interesting remarks about "twenty per cent below cost," etc.

A boy with a big placard on a pole is an interesting object on the street, and lends a dignified air to your establishment. Hire about two.

Advertise on a calendar. People never look at a calendar to see what day of the month it is. They merely glance hurriedly at it so as to be sure that your name is spelled with or without a p, that's all.

When the breezes blow, wafted by a paper fan in the hands of lovely woman 'tis well to have the air redolent with the perfume of the carmine ink in which your business address is printed. This will make the market for decent fans very good.

Patronize every agent that shows you an advertising tablet, card, directory, dictionary, or even an advertising Bible if one is offered at a reasonable price. The man must make a living.

But don't thing of advertising in a well established, legitimate newspaper. Not for a moment. Your advertisement would be nicely printed and would find its way into all the thrifty households of the region, where the farmer, the mechanic, the tradesman in other lines, and into the families of the wealthy and refined, all who have articles to buy and money with which to buy them, and in the quiet of the evening after the news of the day had been digested, it would be read and pondered, and next day people would come down to your store and patronize you, and keep coming in increasing numbers, and you might have to hire an extra clerk or two, move into a larger block and more favorable location and do a bigger business, but of course it would be more expensive—and bring greater profits.—New Haven Register.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

The most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. FROM

REV. P. N. GRANGER,

Presiding Elder of the St. Alban's District.

St. Albans, Vt., Jan. 20th, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: My experience with Kendall's Spavin Cure has been very satisfactory indeed. Three or four years ago I procured a bottle of your agent, and with it cured a horse of lameness caused by a spavin. Last season my horse became very lame and I turned him out for a few weeks, when he became better but when I put him on the road he grew worse, when I discovered that a ring bone was forming. I procured a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure, and with less than a bottle cured him so that he is not lame, neither can the bunch be found.

Respectfully yours, P. N. GRANGER.

Kalamazoo, April 15th, 1879.

I received the two bottles of your spavin cure forwarded by express in January last. I am happy to state that it performed all your advertisement called for. In three weeks after I commenced using it the spavin was entirely removed and a valuable horse restored to usefulness.

Verry truly yours, JOHN PARKER.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE

Is sure in its effects, mild in its action as it does not blister, and yet it is penetrating, and powerful to reach any deep seated pain, or to remove any bony growth or any other enlargement if used for several days, such as spavins, splints, curbs, collons, sprains, swellings, any lameness and all and all enlargements of the joints or limbs, or rheumatism in man and for any purpose for which a liniment is used on man or beast. It is known to be the best liniment for man ever used, acting mild and yet certain in its effects.

Send address for illustrated circular. No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success, to our knowledge, for beast as well as man.

THE BEST REMEDY

FOR

Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

REED'S

TONIC

In every case of fever and ague, it is always a thorough remedy, while for disorders of the stomach, torpidity of the liver, indigestion and disturbances of the animal forces, which debilitate, it has no equivalent and can have no substitute. It should not be confounded with the triturated compounds of cheap spirits and essential oils, often sold under the name of Bitters.
